

What advice would you give to someone considering an opportunity with Bank of America?

“The training program as well as the exposure to all the lines of business provides a great foundation.”

What is your current assignment and primary responsibilities?

I am currently helping the research team roll out coverage of the packaged food stocks within the consumer space. The process involves writing detailed initiation reports, creating and projecting financial statements, and familiarizing ourselves with company management teams.

What is the most challenging part of your job?

One of the most challenging aspects of the job is getting up to speed on all of the companies we cover. Because I joined the team fairly recently, I have a lot of catching up to do as far as learning all the industry drivers, as well as the story behind each individual stock.

What is the best thing about living and working in your location?

Working in the New York headquarters – both at the World Financial Center and One Bryant Park comes with many advantages. Being able to utilize all the different resources, like access to other lines of business and co-workers within equity research, is a primary example.

What advice would you give to someone considering an opportunity at Bank of America?

This is an ideal place to launch a career. The training program as well as the exposure to all the lines of business provides a great foundation for someone who is just out of college, a perk which many smaller shops do not offer.
