

What advice would you give to someone considering an opportunity with Bank of America?

“Attend a campus event to begin networking at the bank.”

What is your current assignment and primary responsibilities?

I am in the CFO Group supporting Customer Segments & Deposits. Specifically, I am responsible for providing financial and analytical support for the Checking Product Management team. My daily responsibilities include anything from performance reporting and forecasting, to business partnering with senior leaders in finance and the line of business, and assisting with business cases for checking products.

What is the most challenging aspect of your job?

Bank of America is constantly changing and adapting to our competitive environment. It's always a challenge to keep up with the ever-changing businesses within our organizational structure, so the most challenging part of my job is ensuring I'm staying up to date with who is responsible for what, within our organization.

What attracted you to Bank of America?

The FMAP Program. I had the opportunity to join a two-year management development program in Finance. This rotational program gave me the opportunity to not only develop my skill set, but also learn with hands-on experience as I worked on various projects at the bank. Bank of America offered the initial training and resources I was looking for, and the opportunity for career advancement after my rotational program ended.

Who is the most influential person in your Bank of America career and why?

I have a former manager who continues to stay in touch with me, providing guidance and honest feedback on my career development. He has taught me the value of networking and the importance of building relationships with my teammates throughout each of my different roles at the bank.

What advice would you give to someone considering an opportunity at Bank of America?

If there is an opportunity to attend a campus event, I highly encourage you to use that opportunity to begin your networking at the bank. Campus events give you the opportunity to meet various associates at the bank and develop an understanding of what working for Bank of America is like. Often many of the associates attending campus events were recruited through a similar fashion, so they are usually the best people to answer your questions and help you genuinely understand the opportunities you may have at Bank of America.
